

Alejandro Alcaraz Sintes has been a Lecturer at the University of Jaén since 1991. He has taught on Linguistics (English Historical Linguistics, Phonetics and Phonology, Descriptive English Grammar, Morphology, Corpus Linguistics, Translation...) at undergraduate, master and doctoral levels. He is interested in the application of new technologies in teaching practice and has created online material for various of his courses. He has also published on the topic in international journals (IJES). He wrote his PhD thesis on the complementation of Old English adjectives, from which have issued a number of papers presented at various international conferences (ICHEL, SELIM, AEDEAN, CILC, HEL-LEX, among others) and book chapters (Cambridge Scholars). He is currently working on a dictionary of Old English adjectival syntactic and semantic complementation, already in press.